SUMMARY

As an Addiction Recovery Specialist, my most significant contributions in the mental health field have come from my career as an author and published researcher. In addition to the websites I maintain for young adult addicts and their parents and my pioneering work in methods for stopping emotional abuse, my self-help books have sold in the millions. I am particularly proud of the ground breaking research I have accomplished in adolescent recovery and most recently the development of web-based self help programs and information for teaching self-respect. I use solution-oriented approaches to life changes rather than focusing on problems.
